Pour tout faire, il faut une fleur at MBAL

Le Locle, Switzerland / 28 March - 6 September

Curated by Nicolas Polli, Pour tout faire, il faut une fleur (To Do Everything, You Need A Flower) is an exploration of the blurred boundaries between photography, graphic design, and hybrid artistic practices. It explores the ambivalence of our time, an era defined both by professional hyper-specialization and by an increasing demand for versatility. The featured artists explore the lifecycle of creation, where tools and behind-the-scenes processes become central works themselves. Through a focus on upcycling, design elements from past exhibitions are transformed into new structures to host current works, illustrating how repetition and reaction drive artistic evolution.

Artists include Jeanne Jacob, Olga Prader, Aldo Mozzini, Enzo Mari, Ayed Arafah, Peter Fischli & David Weiss, Linus Bill & Adrien Horni, Nicolas Polli, Alina Frieske, Ruth van Beek, Erin O'Keefe, Sabine Hess. Conceived as a space for dialogue, the exhibition showcases photographic works, publications, graphic installations, editorial objects, and personal archives. It also includes a participatory installation for children in the Salle Marie-Anne Calame and the adjacent space.
